The Principal will decide on a case-by-case basis whether it is in the best interests of a student to be granted an exemption. While language studies are an important component of the curriculum in Years 6, 7 and 8, there will sometimes be exceptional circumstances that need to be taken into consideration.

Grounds for present application

Student identified as being below the national minimum standard in literacy and/or numeracy as determined by the National Assessment Program – Literacy and Numeracy (NAPLAN).

Student has been granted an exemption from NAPLAN testing as per the established criteria.

Student has cultural, religious or political reasons for an exemption (e.g. evidence may include a testimonial, letter provided by a religious or community leader, statutory declaration, school records, immigration history etc). A principal will determine what constitutes reasonable evidence on a case-by-case basis.

Student is already fulfilling the requirements of school-based language studies.
